

Bucher Front Row Monuments: Full of Opportunities

Bucher is known for their reliable and lightweight designs. Integrating years of experience into its Galley technology, Bucher has attained complete optimization with their integrated Front Row Monuments (FRM). As airlines strive for space saving customization, it is increasingly difficult to integrate the demands of the industry. While maintaining its reputation for robust constructions, Bucher is able to create unique designs for its FRMs that fulfill both customer requirements and aircraft manufacture's specifications.

Known for its aluminum-based designs, Bucher also possesses expertise in composite material processing. Constructed with lightweight honeycomb panels, Bucher FRMs provide an array of surface options which open up a wide range of unique styling and design possibilities; for example, uniquely shaped composite panels combined with high-quality decorative finishing materials can be used to create highly-attractive and individual accents that highlight a customized brand experience.

Smart combinations - More passenger space

By rethinking the front row, we can, for example, integrate the personal IFE or provide extra storage lockers to create more space to be enjoyed by front row passengers. Additionally there is an opportunity to provide extra general storage options such as a coatroom or curtain storage.

Bucher solutions also focus on the back wall of the galley, which often faces the front row, designing it in a way that optimizes cabin space and efficiency while enhancing the interior design of the cabin. Taking advantage of customized FRMs allows airlines to offer more to its passengers.

As Bucher's FRMs are based on the same principle as its well known lightweight Galleys, customers will rest assured knowing Bucher's FRMs will offer the same quality and reliability as seen throughout its entire product line.
